WORDS CLARENCE CORNWELL

Many are fascinated by, if not downright envious of, the wealthy.

Yet, most are unaware of how tough life can be as a millionaire. Alas, one can only imagine the troubles of the über-rich: How many mansions to buy? From what obscure foreign country should the marble floors be imported? Should the island alone be bought? Why not toss in the rights to the island nation as well? Decisions, decisions.

With so much pleasure just a purchase away, the wealthy have indeed perfected the art of spending. So get out the gold-plated checkbook, roll up those custom-embroidered sleeves, and get ready to spend – and live – like the rich and richer.

THE JET•SET

Tired of long lines and hassles at the airport? Do it the John Travolta way. Buy your own private jet and then build your own runway and hanger. On the other hand, if you don't want the hassle of noise ordinance lawsuits, Marquis Jet is just for you. Much like a time-share mansion, you don't buy the jet – you just purchase time with it. Sold in 25-hour increments, prices take off at $109,000 and level off at about $299,000, depending upon the type of aircraft selected. Marquis Jet, in conjunction with NetJets, is a pioneer in fractional aircraft ownership and has a fleet of nine aircraft (an additional four aircraft are available to clients who fly between North America and Europe). NetJets flies more than 250,000 flights a year to more than 140 countries with its fleet of 512 aircraft. This level of coverage guarantees Marquis Jet customers 24-hour service yearlong on short 10 hours notice. Best of all, long-term contracts, monthly management fees and infrastructure costs do not apply.
